Story of the Opera

MARITANA

Opera in Three Acts by William Vincent Wallace, born in Waterford in 1812; died, 1865.

Libretto by Edward Fitzball.

First produced, Drury Lane, London, 15th November, 1845.

PRINCIPAL CHARACTERS

Maritana, a gitana (gypsy) (Soprano).

Lazarillo, a boy apprentice (Mezzo-Soprano).

Don Caesar de Bazan, a penniless Count (Tenor).

Don José de Santarem, a noble (Baritone).

The King of Spain (Bass).

Time—About 1700.

Place—Madrid.

Act I—In a square of Madrid, Maritana sings to the crowd. The King, in disguise, watches her with admiration. Don José perceives this and hopes to use it to further his suit with the Queen. Don Caesar, long absent from Madrid, re-introduces himself to Don José. Lazarillo, running away from his master, is protected by Don Caesar against the Guard, with whose Captain Don Caesar fights, thus incurring the penalty of death by hanging for fighting a duel in Holy Week. He and Lazarillo are arrested. Don José hints to Maritana of advancement and wealth for her.

Act II, Scene 1—Don Caesar's prison. Despite Lazarillo's pleadings, his good humour is irrepressible. Don José agrees to use his influence to have Don Caesar shot and not hanged, on condition that he marry a veiled lady. This is Maritana. Don Caesar consents. As Countess of Bazan, Don José can introduce Maritana at Court. Thus he thinks to smooth his way to the Queen. While the soldiers are drinking, Lazarillo removes the bullets and so Don Caesar escapes. Don José takes Lazarillo into his service.

Scene 2—At the house of the Marquis di Montifiori, Don José has forced the Marquis and his wife to present Maritana as their niece. The King is brought to her as her husband. The escaped Don Caesar arrives, demanding to see his wife, who is kept from him.

Act III—The Royal villa at Aranjuez, near Madrid. The King presses his suit on Maritana. Don José has held back a Royal pardon granted to Don Caesar, who forces an entry into the villa. The King, not wishing to be known, declares himself Count of Bazan, wherefore Don Caesar claims to be King. So he learns of the Royal pardon. Don Caesar convinces Maritana that it is he she wedded. Seeking the Queen's aid, he is in time to save the Queen from the insolent Don José, who falls in the encounter. He enters and reveals all to the King, who restores Maritana to him and appoints him Governor of Valencia.

PRINCIPAL NUMBERS

Overture: Partly based on themes from the Opera.

Act I—Solo and Chorus: Maritana—"Tis the harp in the air."

Chorus: Angelus—"Angels, that round us hover."

Duet: Maritana and José—"Of fairy wand, had I the power."

Finale: Principals and Chorus: "Farewell, my gallant Captain."

Act II, Scene 1—Solo: Lazarillo—"Alas, those chimes."

Trio: Lazarillo, José, Caesar—"Turn on, old time."

Solo: Caesar—"Yes, let me like a soldier fall."

Solo: José—"In happy moments."

Scene 2—Solo: The King—"Hear me, gentle Maritana."

Solo: Don Caesar—"There is a flower that bloometh."

Finale: Principals and Chorus—"What mystery."

Act III—Solo: Maritana—"Scenes that are brightest."

Duet: King and Caesar—"I am the King of Spain."

Duet: Maritana and Caesar—"Oh, Maritana, wild wood-flower."

Duet: Maritana and Lazarillo, Prayer—"Sainted Mother."

Finale: Maritana and Chorus—"With rapture glowing."
